

Ms. Liora Danan

During her 2009-2010 Fellowship, Ms. Danan was the Director of Special Projects for the Middle East Program at the Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation at the University of California and an adjunct fellow with the International Center for Religion and Diplomacy. She was the lead author of a Center for Strategic & International Studies report on U.S. government engagement with religion in conflict-prone settings. With the support of the Crapa Fellowship, she looked at practical ways to better utilize U.S. public diplomacy initiatives to promote religious freedom, developing a list of recommendations for incorporating discussion of religion and religious freedom principles into public diplomacy work. Find below a link to her Fellowship report which has been used at the Foreign Service Institute:

Religion and Global Affairs: A Public Diplomacy Approach