Solicitation Number: USCIRF RFQ20002
Examination of Anti-Semitism in the OSCE Region

I. OBJECTIVE
This research would seek to enhance the understanding of the phenomenon of anti-Semitism in European countries and government responses to it, in order to make specific and effective recommendations for United States policy. USCIRF is interested in proposals for comparative research on the contexts and approaches taken in countries within the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) region, including France, Germany, Sweden, and the United Kingdom, at a minimum.

II. BACKGROUND
The U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom (“USCIRF” or “Commission”) is an independent, bipartisan U.S. federal government commission created by the 1998 International Religious Freedom Act (IRFA). USCIRF has nine Commissioners that are appointed by the President and Congressional leaders of both political parties. USCIRF is separate from the State Department, although the Department’s Ambassador-at-Large for International Religious Freedom is a non-voting ex officio Commissioner.

USCIRF is statutorily mandated to (1) monitor and review the facts and circumstances of religious freedom abroad; (2) make policy recommendations to the President, the Secretary of State and the Congress regarding international religious freedom; and (3) evaluate U.S. policies in response to violations of and progress towards religious freedom in foreign countries. Further, USCIRF is mandated to evaluate the potential effects of its policy recommendations on religious communities and individuals whose rights have been violated.

Inherent in religious freedom is the right to believe or not believe as one’s conscience leads, and live out one’s beliefs openly, peacefully, and without fear. Freedom of religion or belief is an expansive right that includes the freedoms of thought, conscience, expression, association, and assembly. While religious freedom is America’s first freedom, it also is a core human right international law and treaty recognize; a necessary component of U.S. foreign policy and America’s commitment to defending democracy and freedom globally; and a vital element of national security, critical to ensuring a more peaceful, prosperous, and stable world.

III. SCOPE
The Contractor shall focus the research on areas to include but not limited to:

- An examination of the diverse manifestations of anti-Jewish hatred in each country of research, including the number and types of hate crimes and hate-motivated incidents – as defined by the OSCE – committed against Jews, and the process for tracking hate crimes. The research will highlight illustrative examples of attacks that contextualize country conditions.

- An analysis of each government’s response to anti-Semitism in their country, including the robustness of hate crime reporting by law enforcement, the availability of security assistance to Jewish institutions, the engagement of law enforcement with Jewish communities, and judicial efficacy in adjudicating hate crime cases. The research shall consider the effectiveness of these responses in combatting anti-Semitism and protecting Jewish communities, synagogues, cemeteries, and other places or property.

- A review of how United States foreign policy, including the Office of the U.S. Special Envoy to Monitor and Combat Anti-Semitism, has engaged on the situation of Jews in these countries, and any recommendations for improved engagement by the U.S. government to address this issue.
